Cincinnati has become the "model" city for most attempts to form a charter government.

Directors decided to hold regular monthly meetings.

Edward VIII Informs Commons of Possibility; Few Eligibles Remain

LONDON, March 11—(UP)—King Edward VIII, Britain's 41-year-old bachelor king, informed the House of Commons today that there is a possibility he may get married.

The news was contained in a message from the king, asking Commons to renew the civil list, which provides funds for the royal household and family, and is set by Commons at the start of each sovereign's reign.

Although the king's name has been linked romantically with many royal women in years past, the list of those considered conceivably eligible to marry him was shrunk greatly.

Among those remaining still unwed are Princess Juliana of the Netherlands; Princesses Irene, Catherine and Eugenie of Greece; and Grand Duchess Kyrle of Russia.

CONCERN IS FELT FOR 3 AMERICANS AS PLANES RAID

ADDIS ABABA, March 11—(UP)—Concern was felt here today for seven white missionaries, three of them Americans, after reports that two Ethiopian villages were bombed in airplane raids which were believed to signal a renewal of the Italian drive on the southern front.

It was reported reliably that 50 natives were killed in the bombing of Debra Markos and an official communique issued today said that five women and three children were killed by bombs and 21 women and 12 children wounded at Iergaalem.

The missionaries unreported were in Debra Markos. Those Americans last listed with the Sudan interior mission there were Donald Davies and his wife and Nicholas Simpkins.

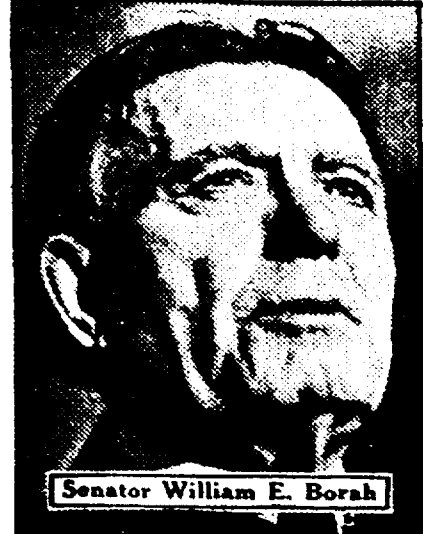

There has been little aviation activity on the southern front recently and observers here believed the renewed bombings indicated the beginning of a new drive toward Addis Ababa.

Ready For the Gong! Borah Vs. Regulars

Senator William E. Borah

Robert A. Taft

Frank E. Gannett

Charles R. Frederickson

FIRST rounds in the fight of Senator William E. Borah against Republican regulars for the G. O. P. presidential nomination will occur March 19 when the Idaho senator will open his campaign with a speech in Youngstown, O. Ohio became the preliminary battlefield because the Ohio primary law required filing first and second choice possibilities immediately for the presidential primary to be held on May 12. On the Borah side, the senator has designated himself as first choice and Frank E. Gannett, publisher of several important papers in New York state, as second choice. The regulars on the other hand, have designated Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, as first choice, and Charles R. Frederickson, of Cleveland, O., as second choice. The regulars are especially eager to put over their "favorite son" in Ohio, so as to swing the state's 52 delegates to whatever candidate they desire in the national convention at Cleveland in June. The two opposing sets of running mates in Ohio are shown above.

Condon Leaves Panama Returning to New York

Dutch, Reported Gov. Hoffman's Emissary, Reaches Cristobal After Jafsie Leaves; Departure is Mysterious

TRENTON, N. J., March 11—(UP)—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman demanded of state police today that they arrange to cross examine Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon about the Lindbergh kidnaping case the minute he arrives in the United States from Panama.

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, March 11—(UP)—Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the eccentric Bronx schoolteacher who handled the ransom negotiations in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping case, was en route to New York today, having sailed suddenly on the liner Santa Inez last night.

His leaving coincided with a visit here by Andrew K. Dutch, New Jersey state motor vehicle inspector.

When Dutch left New York it was reported that he intended to interview Dr. Condon for Governor Harold G. Hoffman, who has been active in behalf of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, condemned murderer of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Both Dutch and Hoffman denied the report, although Hoffman consistently has questioned discrepancies in the stories told by Dr. Condon before, during and after Hauptmann's trial at Flemington, N. J.

Dutch, on a Caribbean cruise, arrived here this morning.

Dr. Condon, vacationing in the Canal Zone with his daughter, Mrs. Myra Hacker, had said recently that his stay here would be indefinite.

Mysterious, too, was Dr. Condon's departure from Panama. He sailed suddenly from Brooklyn just before Hauptmann was scheduled to be executed in the middle of January.

A reprieve by Governor Hoffman saved Hauptmann then. The German carpenter has been sentenced to die the week of March 30.

The 11th district congressional race took on new color Wednesday with Robert L. Immell, Pickaway-co native now a resident of Yellowbud, gaining support of the county's Democratic leaders, and of the powers-that-be in Ross-co.

It was disclosed with authority that George G. Adkins, county chairman, will lend his support to Mr. Immell's candidacy. Adkins Mayor James Ford and Judge William McKenzie, leaders of the opposition in power in Ross-co, are championing Mr. Immell's campaign.

Several members of the Pickaway-co executive committee are circulating Mr. Immell's petition, while names of many of the other executives have been signed.

Owens County Lead

The candidate, recently connected with the government's investigation of the Lindbergh case, owns about 500 acres of Pickaway-co land and manages the operation of 1,000-acre farms.

Two other candidates have recently entered the race for the Democratic nomination. They are Edward K. Claypool of Chillicothe, brother of Garrett Claypool, son of Mayor Ford, and Barton McKee of Logan.

Both have filed their petitions with the Ross-co board of elections issuing statements.

Mr. Claypool said:

"I am a candidate for the Democrats."

On the Borah side, the senator has designated himself as first choice and Frank E. Gannett, publisher of several important papers in New York state, as second choice. The regulars, on the other hand, have designated Robert A. Taft, of Cincinnati, as first choice, and Charles R. Frederickson, of Coshocton, O., as second choice. The regulars are especially eager to put over their "favorite son" in Ohio, so as to swing the state's 52 delegates to whatever candidate they desire in the national convention at Cleveland in June. The two opposing sets of running mates in Ohio are shown above.

Condon Leaves Panama Returning to New York

Dutch, Reported Gov. Hoffman's Emissary, Reaches Cristobal After Jafsie Leaves; Departure is Mysterious

Copyright 1936 By United Press TRENTON, N. J., March 11.—(UP)—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman demanded of state police today that they arrange to cross examine Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon about the Lindbergh kidnapping case the minute he arrives in the United States from Panama.

CRISTOBAL, Canal Zone, March 11.—(UP)—Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon, the eccentric Bronx schoolteacher who handled the ransom negotiations in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping case, was en route to New York today, having sailed suddenly on the liner Santa Inez last night.

His leaving coincided with a visit here by Andrew K. Dutch, New Jersey state motor vehicle inspector.

When Dutch left New York it was reported that he intended to interview Dr. Condon for Governor Harold G. Hoffman, who has been active in behalf of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, condemned murderer of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Both Dutch and Hoffman denied the report, although Hoffman consistently has questioned discrepancies in the stories told by Dr. Condon before, during and after Hauptmann's trial at Flemington, N. J.

Dutch, on a Caribbean cruise, arrived here this morning. Dr. Condon, vacationing in the Canal Zone with his daughter, Mrs. Myra Hacker, had said recently that his stay here would be indefinite.

Mysterious, too, was Dr. Condon's departure from Panama. He sailed suddenly from Brooklyn just before Hauptmann was scheduled to be executed in the middle of January.

A reprieve by Governor Hoffman saved Hauptmann then. The German carpenter has been sentenced to die, the week of March 30.

Statements Issued as Chillicothe and Logan Men File Their Petitions

The 11th district congressional race took on new color Wednesday with Robert L. Immell, Pickaway-co native now a resident of Yellowbud, gaining support of the county's Democratic leaders and of the powers-that-be in Ross-co.

It was disclosed with authority that George G. Adkins, county chairman, will lend his support to Mr. Immell's candidacy, while Mayor James Ford and Judge Wilbur McKenzie, leaders of the faction in power in Ross-co, are championing Mr. Immell's campaign.

Several members of the Pickaway-co executive committee are circulating Mr. Immell's petitions, while names of many of the other executives have been signed.

Owens County Land

The candidate, recently connected with the government's land commission program in several states, owns about 500 acres of Pickaway-co land and manages the operation of 1,000 more acres.

Two other candidates have definitely entered the race for the Democratic nomination. They are Harold K. Claypool of Chillicothe, brother of Garrett Claypool, foe of Mayor Ford, and Barton Holl of Logan.

Both have filed their petitions with the Ross-co board of elections issuing statements.

Mr. Claypool said:

D. R.'S POWER IN STATE VOTE SURPRISES MANY

President, Blamed for Processing Tax Trouble, Wins All Delegates

KNOX NAMED BY G. O. P.

Inflation Effort of Retired Dentists Defeated in New Hampshire

CONCORD, N. H., March 11.—(UP)—President Roosevelt and Frank Knox won a head start over rival candidates for the presidency in New Hampshire's primary yesterday.

There was a chance that returns from the last few precincts reporting today might give Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas one vote among New Hampshire's 11 in the Republican nominating convention, but the other 10 were Knox's, with Landon second choice among the unpledged delegates.

President Roosevelt won all the state's eight Democratic delegates-at-large and four district delegates, who will exercise eight convention votes. Delegates pledged to New Deal support, defeated adherents of Dr. Joseph A. Coutermarsh of Lebanon, retired dentist advocating an inflation nostrum, in every contest.

Carter Makes Fight

State Senator Eliot A. Carter of Nashua made a surprisingly successful fight for Landon against the state Republican organization supporting Knox, the "favorite son."

With the vote of 224 towns and wards of 295 tabulated, he was only 139 votes from winning a seat as delegate-at-large. He had 8,270 votes to 8,408 for Harold K. Davidson, eighth among the 16 candidates for eight seats.

While a victory for Carter would win Landon only one convention vote, its psychological value would be important. None of the Republican delegates will be formally pledged to any candidate. The state organization, headed by Gov. H. Styles Bridges, former Senator George H. Moses and former Governors Huntley N. Spaulding and Charles W. Tobey, supported Knox but avoided a commitment. It is common knowledge that if Knox's candidacy collapsed in the convention, they would turn to Landon as second choice.

proved principally that discontent over New Deal processing taxes is not so potent as Republicans had hoped and as some Democrats had feared. Many leaders of the state's vital textile industry blame the AAA processing tax for many of the industry's ailments. The voters apparently did not share the feeling, for Coutermarsh did not carry even his own home town and no unpledged delegate won election.

"There seems to be something wrong with our ships today," he observed to his flag captain at one of the tensest moments. "Just take us two points closer to the enemy, please."

BREHMER GIVES ADVICE DEALING WITH GARDENING

Folk feel the urge with the up-swinging sun to tinker round the yard and garden and a lot of energy is often misdirected.

There is the trimming urge that damages a lot of trees and shrubs, and chaff and manure are spread on lawns, then folk wonder where all the weeds come from.

It is not too soon to be thinking of the lawn. Rolling now and later will be a great benefit to a lot of lawns, especially where young grass is starting. Manure is messy, evil smelling and of doubtful value because of the fungus disease and seed of weeds that it contains. A small amount of commercial fertilizer will do more good and much less harm but should not be applied until the grass has started to grow, preferably about April 1 to 10. Grass seed can be well sown right now and up to warm weather. Use a shade mixture where there is shade more than one third of the day for bluegrass will not live long where it does not get full time sun. When sowing grass seed it helps a lot if a fine mulch of garden soil or peat is applied on the top of the seed.

Oil up the pruning shears but use judgment in their use. Monthly roses should not be trimmed now, and neither should ramblers nor climbers. Wait until May to trim the monthly or ever-blooming roses and then cut them back very severely. This year a lot of them will be frozen back to the ground, and those who mounded a little soil around their roses will have saved a lot of roses that would otherwise have been frost killed.

Climbers and ramblers should not be trimmed except for dead wood until after they have bloomed and then the ramblers can be cut back to the ground and the climbers much less severely, leaving five to six foot canes. Shrubs should be trimmed during and a good general rule is to not trim the shrubs that bloom before late June until after they have bloomed for their bloom comes on last year's wood and when you trim them you trim off bloom when you trim off branches.

What's This We're Told? Winters to be Even Worse?

Veteran Weatherman Advises Us to Heed Warning

READING, Pa., March 10.—So you think we've had a tough winter?

Cock an ear to this dire prediction.

"Next winter will be still worse, and the winter after that worse than ever. People had better take a warning and, like Boy Scouts, 'Be prepared!'"

A Mighty Predictor Is He!

The prediction comes from Henry E. Hathaway, federal weather observer, meteorologist and scientist, who wrinkled his brow and pursed his lips as he studied his charts on the top floor of the Berks county courthouse, where his headquarters are situated.

"It's like this," said Hathaway, long described as one of the few remaining federal "long-time weather prognosticators", "the days of real 'old-fashioned winters' have returned and they will be with us for some years to come."

Moves in Cycles

"Meteorologists," he added, "have known for many years that weather, bad and good, moves in cycles. The length of this, we have determined, is 24 years."

"For 17 years the cycle moves slowly upward into the higher temperatures and we enjoy moderate winters. Then the cycle starts its downward course and its speed is increased. Each winter grows more severe. Temperatures hit new low levels and snowfalls are deeper."

"At the present time, the cycle is descending. It has been descending for about three years and the winters have been growing colder."

Four More—At Least!

"So I figure that we face at least four more increasingly bad winters before the cycle changes its course and we enjoy a return to normal weather. I do not like to be discouraging, but figures do not lie, and my records for the past 24 years—and the records of my predecessors—prove that this theory has more than a grain of absolute truth in it."

And the reason? Hathaway scratched his head. "You would ask that," he replied. "People always want reasons for things. Especially newspapermen. Well, I'll blooming can be trimmed very severely and will survive. Most spruce around town has been much neglected and can be much improved by severe trimming followed each year by less severe trimming. Grapes, of course, should be trimmed back to two eyes of last year's growth for fruit and more eyes can be left if more vines and foliage is desired. The best time to trim grapes is within the week nearest to March 25.

Opinions differ but draw your own conclusions. The dumbest thing that folk do is to rake the lawn in the spring. They comb out all the dead grass which if left to rot will keep the grass roots cool in the hot summer and when decomposed this dead grass makes the finest mulch that could be wanted. Young grass plants just getting started are pulled out by the roots and a lot of roots of the old grass are exposed to the air and killed. Rake if you want to but don't say we did not warn you.

Sun Spots Involved

"Atmospheric conditions, sun spots and half a dozen other things are involved. But to name one specific reason—that is impossible."

For many years Berks county's amiable weatherman has made extraordinarily precise "long time" predictions of bad weather, droughts, floods and windstorms. His percentage of accuracy, records at Washington, D. C., will disclose are "the tops."

He grins when his record is mentioned.

Relatives investigated and discovered Harry had driven in several western jack rabbits.

"For 17 years the cycle moves slowly upward into the higher temperatures and we enjoy moderate winters. Then the cycle starts its downward course and its speed is increased. Each winter grows more severe. Temperatures hit new low levels and snowfalls are deeper.

"At the present time, the cycle is descending. It has been descending for about three years and the winters have been growing colder.

Four More—At Least!

"So I figure that we face at least four more increasingly bad winters before the cycle changes its course and we enjoy a return to normal weather. I do not like to be discouraging, but figures do not lie, and my records for the past 24 years—and the records of my predecessors—prove that this theory has more than a grain of absolute truth in it."

And the reason?

Hathaway scratched his head. "You would ask that," he replied. "People always want reasons for things. Especially newspapermen. Well, I'll blooming can be trimmed very severely and will survive. Most spirea around town has been much neglected and can be much improved by severe trimming followed each year by less severe trimming. Grapes, of course, should be trimmed back to two eyes of last year's growth for fruit and more eyes can be left if more vines and foliage is desired. The best time to trim grapes is within the week nearest to March 25.

Opinions differ but draw your own conclusions. The dumbest thing that folk do is to rake the lawn in the spring. They comb out all the dead grass which if left to rot will keep the grass roots cool in the hot summer and when decomposed this dead grass makes the finest mulch that could be wanted. Young grass plants just getting started are pulled out by the roots and a lot of roots of the old grass are exposed to the air and killed. Rake if you want to but don't say we did not warn you.

be frank with you. Scientists have as yet to lay their fingers on a definite reason for this cycle.

Sun Spots Involved

"Atmospheric conditions, sun spots and half a dozen other things are involved. But to name one specific reason—that is impossible."

For many years Berks county's amiable weatherman has made extraordinarily precise "long time" predictions of bad weather, droughts, floods and windstorms. His percentage of accuracy, records at Washington, D. C., will disclose are "the tops."

He grins when his record is mentioned.

"I'm an old goose-bone prophet," Hathaway usually remarks, and dismisses the matter. But he is a "goose-bone prophet" with plenty of carefully prepared data.

Relatives investigated and discovered Harry had driven in several western jack rabbits.

With All My Heart BY SARA CHRISTY

CHAPTER 35

WHEN THORA entered the big jewelry establishment at five minutes to 4, for her appointment, she looked about without seeing any sign of her friends. Inquiries resulted finally in the information that Miss Marsh and a gentleman were in a rear room with Mr. Edmond and that Miss Dahl was to join them.

She followed the attendant to a small apartment lighted by a single high window. At a table, covered with black felt, she found Wilma and Al Babba conversing with an imposing, frock-coated gentleman who proved to be the proprietor of Edmond's.

"You're just in time to see something pretty, Miss Dahl," Wilma explained, as Thora seated herself in the chair Mr. Edmond placed next to his own. The girl opened a leather case she was holding in her hands and passed it across the table. "That's the bracelet I was telling you about. It's just been finished."

Thora drew a quick breath as she gazed down at the flashing ornament. She never had seen anything like it. A solid circle of square-cut stones, huge . . . so they seemed to her . . . scintillating and sparkling afresh with every move of her hand.

"Take it out and look at it . . . it won't bite," Wilma said laughingly.

"I'm afraid to."

"Here . . ." Mr. Edmond lifted the bracelet from the case and laid it on the table. "So . . . against this black. It brings out the brilliancy, does it not?"

"It's marvelous," Thora sighed.

"I'm still afraid of it."

"I believe that we never have had anything finer in our hands," the jeweler admitted. "We are quite proud of it. When do you wish it delivered, Miss Marsh? Or, perhaps, you are going to place it in a bank vault."

"I'm going to take it home with me now . . . and the two large rings."

"But, my dear Miss Marsh . . ."

Edmond expostulated, "do you not think it would be better and safer to have them delivered by regular messenger . . . the insurance and all, you know."

"I don't see why," Wilma returned coolly. "I'm going to want them before very long now. I'll pop them in the safe as soon as we get home . . . they've been there for a long time, I think."

"I believe that Mr. Edmond is right, Wilma," Babba advised. "I don't like the idea of you driving around the country roads with those jewels. After all, that bracelet's a small fortune, don't you know."

Thora found herself thinking that Al Babba had assumed his foreign manner, together with the monocle.

"Nonsense!" Wilma exclaimed impatiently. "I have fat with me, and Miss Dahl, too. I won't be getting out of the car for anything after we leave the store, and we'll be home long before dark."

Edmond shrugged his immaculate shoulders, closed the case containing the bracelet and handed it to its owner.

"As you will. You have the rings in your bag?"

"Yes," Wilma peeped into it to make sure. "And here goes the bracelet," she added. "No one knows that I'm taking it today. So if there is any trouble between here and Fair Acres, we'll know where to look for the tip-off man. Lucky for you, Alec, you're leaving town. You should have a water-tight alibi."

She closed her bag with a laugh, as she made ready to leave.

"I meant to show you the ring Alec gave me," Wilma explained to Thora as they sat side by side in the car on their way back to Fair Acres. "I think, though, I will wait until we get home."

"That would be better," Thora agreed. "I am quite anxious to see it, though."

"It is a beautiful stone . . . rather odd. Alec was very particular about the setting he wanted, so I advised him to turn it over to Edmond. He is very well satisfied with it, so I know it must be a good job. Alec is rather . . . fussy. About things of that sort." Wilma leaned back and laid her head against the cushions with a sigh.

"You look tired, Miss Marsh," Thora observed sympathetically.

"I'm all right . . . and don't call me Miss Marsh, when we're alone. I don't like it." She turned her head so that she could look at the other girl who reclined in the corner of the seat.

"Thora . . . I wish you'd tell me something, if you don't mind."

"Of course. What is it?"

"Were you ever . . . in love with anyone?" Before Thora had time to answer this blunt question Wilma interrupted herself apologetically.

"I'm sorry. I don't know why I asked you that. Forget it."

"But I don't mind telling," Thora smiled. "I never have been . . . I think."

"Then you haven't. You're the sort of a girl who would be sure. You'd have to be sure . . . and, then, you'd never change your mind. You're like that."

"Why not?"

"Only because the old idea is outmoded now. You'll find it out sooner or later," she finished with a frown, opening the bag that lay on her lap and searching for her cigarettes.

Thora watched her intently as she tossed the match through the open window. The older girl was thinking again how closely Wilma resembled her father in her facial expression and manner of speaking. That it was the first time she ever had spoken in so intimate a fashion. Thora suddenly took her courage in her hand.

"Then you mean . . . you're not very sure?"

"Not to your way of thinking," Wilma admitted with a mischievous little smile. "Why should I be?"

"To be happy."

"Now that is provincial! People don't marry for happiness these days. You're probably thinking of your father and mother."

It was perhaps the first time Thora ever had put that question to herself in concrete form. Were Hjalmar and Mary Dahl happy in their life together? Their daughter was unable to recall a single gesture of affection between the two. They seemed to take each other for granted and . . . just lived. It had been much the same way with herself, when she was at home. Always taking things for granted . . . almost always. Wilma broke in on her train of thought by saying, in her direct fashion:

"I know that my father and mother never were happy while they were together. It may be inheritance . . . but I don't know of any married people who are very wild about each other. You don't have to be these days."

"But why?"

"Because you don't have to stick it out if you don't like it."

"And you feel that way about your own marriage?"

"Why not? It's merely a matter of common sense."

"I think it's dreadful . . . I dot Marriage ought to mean everything . . . something for life. I would want to be so . . . sure."

"Didn't I tell you so?" Wilma smiled tolerantly. "You think I should be mad about Alec. I think I am . . . as nearly as I could ever be. He appeals to me more than any man I've ever met. I feel almost silly about him at times, even. He likes the things I do . . . to travel, do things. Maybe I am a thrill hunter . . . but I never could settle down around here and do the stuffy things the rest of them do."

Fights Millionaire Over Son

"YOU won my husband, but you'll not get my son." Thus, in effect, spoke Mrs. Anita Borg, 19-year-old wife of George Marshall Borg, shown in Chicago court, battling her millionaire father-in-law over custody of the child. Mrs. Borg filed suit for separate maintenance from her husband. The elder Borg said he would establish a trust fund for the boy if he won him.

reports of Anthony Eden, Foreign secretary, and Viscount Halifax, lord privy seal, on their negotiations in Paris. They were expected here late today.

Army, air force and navy chiefs were busy discussing the continental military situation while the cabinet ministers discussed policies which will affect the immediate future of all Europe.

The conference of Locarno powers—Britain, France, Belgium and

Paris indicated that the first job of the government was to meet a series of French demands which called for harsh penalties against Germany unless a solution of the present crisis is effected.

But these demands were qualified with other demands of great importance to Great Britain:

- 1—That Britain give France a new guarantee of armed assistance in event of a German invasion.
- 2—That the French and British general staffs prepare a specific joint plan to deal with any emergency.
- 3—That League penalties against Italy in the Ethiopian dispute be dropped so that Premier Benito Mussolini may be brought into the allied front.

France would ask a virtual ultimatum of Adolf Hitler to withdraw his Rhineland troops, on pain of penalties the first of which would be withdrawal of diplomatic envoys from Berlin by league nations.

But these demands were qualified by an alternative: that Germany promise not to fortify the Rhineland, that she return to the league; that she negotiate limitation of armaments and that she participate in a European defensive air force treaty that would unite the air fleets of the powers against an aggressor.

Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin and Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium were expected tonight.

There were reports that Adolf Hitler might be represented by a special observer, perhaps Joachim von Ribbentrop, his roving ambassador. Even if none is sent Dr. Leopold von Hoesch, the ambassador, will be here, to act as liaison agent for expected messages to Berlin.

The meeting of the league council Saturday will be held at St. James's palace.

From the meetings, it is hoped here, there may emerge from Hitler's reoccupation of the Rhineland and France's anger and alarm, a program of pacification that will result in reassurances of their safety to France and Belgium; in Germany's return to the League of Nations; and in Italy's emergence from the gold-draining adventure in East Africa.

GERMAN PLANES REPORTED OVER FRENCH BORDER

Newspapers Hint Attempt Being Made to Provoke Nasty Incident

PARIS, March 11—(UP)—Six times in the last two days German planes have crossed the French frontier, it was learned today.

In each instance, French aircraft have ascended to intercept the German planes and chase them across the border.

Most recent incidents were reported from Veckring, where a German plane was sighted at an altitude of 6,000 feet at a point approximately four miles inside French territory, at Montmey, two miles on the French side of the border, and at Kanfen, near the frontier.

Monday German planes crossed the Luxembourg frontier and also the French frontier from the Saar. Sixth army corps headquarters at Nancy said a German plane flew over the French village of Waldwisse in the department of Moselle and a second German plane had been seen to the south of Waldwisse but it was not certain if it had crossed the boundary.

The newspaper Excelsior said that "it is not impossible that Germany is seeking to provoke an incident which would facilitate conversations with other signatories to the Locarno treaty."

The newspaper Jours reported that because of the tense border situation staff headquarters and a telephone center had been established by the French at Nancy in the basement of the municipal theater.

A detachment of 400 men of the ninth anti-aircraft also were quartered in the theater.

It would also be empowered to require distributors to post bond to guarantee payment for milk purchased from producers, and to investigate complaints involving the price of milk to consumers. It would not be vested with any authority to fix prices to be paid producers or charged to consumers.

Previous bills approved by the house have all included price-fixing features, designed to protect the farmer-producers in marketing his product. Because the substitute bill lacks this provision, principal advocates of milk control legislation are of the opinion the measure will die in committee.

Members of the special sub-committee submitting the substitute bill were: Senators Oliver S. Nelson (R, Fayette), R. A. Pollock (R, Stark), James M. Matthews (D, Clark), William H. Herder (D, Huron) and Emerson Campbell (D, Belmont).

Fights Millionaire Over Son

"YOU won my husband, but you'll not get my son." Thus, in effect, spoke Mrs. Anita Borg, 19-year-old wife of George Marshall Borg, shown in Chicago court, battling her millionaire father-in-law over custody of the child. Mrs. Borg filed suit for separate maintenance from her husband. The elder Borg said he would establish a trust fund for the boy if he won him.

PARIS, March 11—(UP)—A government official today denied categorically a report circulated abroad that France has threatened to withdraw from the League of Nations.

Italy—is to be opened at 4 p. m. tomorrow after a series of preliminary talks among delegates.

Foreign Minister Pierre Etienne Flandin and Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium were expected tonight.

There were reports that Adolf Hitler might be represented by a special observer, perhaps Joachim von Ribbentrop, his roving ambassador. Even if none is sent Dr. Leopold von Hoesch, the ambassador, will be here, to act as liaison agent for expected messages to Berlin.

The meeting of the league council Saturday will be held at St. James's palace.

From the meetings, it is hoped here, there may emerge from Hitler's reoccupation of the Rhineland and France's anger and alarm, a program of pacification that will result in reassurances of their safety to France and Belgium; in Germany's return to the League of Nations; and in Italy's emergence from the gold-draining adventure in East Africa.

Solution Demanded
Authoritative advices from

Paris indicated that the first job of the government was to meet a series of French demands which called for harsh penalties against Germany unless a solution of the present crisis is effected.

But these demands were qualified with other demands of greatest importance to Great Britain: 1—That Britain give France a new guarantee of armed assistance in event of a German invasion.

2—That the French and British general staffs prepare a specific joint plan to deal with any emergency.

3—That League penalties against Italy in the Ethiopian dispute be dropped so that Premier Benito Mussolini may be brought into the allied front.

France would ask a virtual ultimatum of Adolf Hitler to withdraw his Rhineland troops, on pain of penalties the first of which would be withdrawal of diplomatic envoys from Berlin by league nations.

But these demands were qualified by an alternative: that Germany promise not to fortify the Rhineland, that she return to the league; that she negotiate limitation of armaments and that she participate in a European defensive air force treaty that would unite the air fleets of the powers against an aggressor.

REPAIRS TO ELIMINATE 'MILK' FROM CITY WATER

Have you noticed the city water had a milk appearance at times during the last week that quickly disappeared?

The standpipe was damaged by freezing during the severe cold weather and repairs were made by the water company. During that time the city water was pumped directly into the mains and contained a lot of air, employees explained. This air caused the milky appearance in the water.

Repairs to the huge tank have been completed and the standpipe is again being used. Practically all of the excess air in the mains has been removed.

GERMAN PLANES REPORTED OVER FRENCH BORDER

Newspapers Hint Attempt Being Made to Provoke Nasty Incident

PARIS, March 11—(UP)—Six times in the last two days German planes have crossed the French frontier, it was learned today.

In each instance, French aircraft have ascended to intercept the German planes and chase them across the border.

Most recent incidents were reported from Veckring, where a German plane was sighted at an altitude of 6,000 feet at a point approximately four miles inside French territory, at Montmey, two miles on the French side of the border, and at Kanfen, near the frontier.

Monday German planes crossed the Luxembourg frontier and also the French frontier from the Saar.

Sixth army corps headquarters at Nancy said a German plane flew over the French village of Waldwisse in the department of Moselle and a second German plane had been seen to the south of Waldwisse but it was not certain if it had crossed the boundary.

The newspaper Eclair said that "it is not impossible that Germany is seeking to provoke an incident which would facilitate conversations with other signatories to the Locarno treaty."

The newspaper Jours reported that because of the tense border situation staff headquarters and a telephone center had been established by the French at Nancy in the basement of the municipal theater.

A detachment of 400 men of the ninth anti-aircraft also were quartered in the theater.

END OF AN ERA

THE evidence is at every hand that the era of the street car is drawing to a close. In smaller cities the trolley car has surrendered completely to bus lines. Now the extermination of street cars in America's largest city on one of her most famous streets.

Busses have supplanted street cars on Broadway, operating from South Perry to Times Square and, it is reported, already are carrying 50 per cent more passengers than did the electric street cars which they replaced. If this volume of traffic continues, the bus will play the part of a go-getter in the transportation business. The experience on Broadway may find a parallel elsewhere in the city. Early estimates indicate that the busses on the Columbus-Lenox avenue line are carrying between 50 and 75 per cent more passengers than did the trolley car.

A part of the increased use of busses is explained by the fact that they have proved to be successful competitors of the taxicabs and of the subway. They also, doubtless, obtain patronage from among people who would make short journeys on foot rather than take the trolleys. But whatever the reason, the business of the busses, if they continue popular they will be used in increasing numbers.

Already there is talk in New York of the entire elimination of the street cars, and if New York can bring that to pass so can other large cities. It spells the final doom of the "broomstock train" whose praises were sung by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

BLUSTERY MARCH

MARCH, with its strong winds and fickle weathers, might be compared to some very blustering person, who talks loud and acts in a rough and violent way. Yet its constantly ascending sun is a redeeming feature, and this too emphatic creature keeps thawing us out with his sunny light, so we half like him after all.

March is an unpopular month in most climates, because of this boisterous character. But let us not be afraid of good strong March winds. March is the month when many of us dismiss the doctor, and decide we can go it alone.

An important success for the Ethiopians is reported by the cables. Opening of the rainy season finds Haile Selassie with his traditional sixteen umbrellas and Mussolini with none.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

Because he is so vehement an anti-red alarmist Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, has the reputation of being an ultra-conservative.

But he believes he is a liberal.

And, decidedly against the consensus of opinion among his congressional associates, I agree with him.

For example, it seems to me that he demonstrated an extraordinary degree of open-mindedness, considering how anti-radical he is, when he recently expressed approval of the Columbia Broadcasting System's policy in granting free time to Secretary Earl Browder of the American Communist party.

As an outstanding "anti" to everything communistic, the New Yorker was chosen to answer Browder, which he did. He disputed Browder's assertions in every particular, but voiced his satisfaction that a chance had been afforded to the red spokesman to address the country. It proved, he said, that free speech exists in the United States.

MOTIVE FOR FDR'S TAX PLAN TOLD

WASHINGTON — Revenue raising is only the secondary objective of the President's tax program.

Its chief purpose is the distribution of static wealth; to force into use billions of dollars lying idle in the coffers of corporations.

The germ of this underlying social motive was enunciated by Roosevelt in his surprise tax message last May, when his target was large inheritances.

Since then he has done considerable reading on the subject of taxation, particularly four slender volumes: "Brass Tacks" by David Cushman Coyle; "Income and Economic Progress"; "America's Capacity to Produce"; and "America's Capacity to Consume", the last three published by Brookings Institution.

The central theme of these studies is that the accumulation of idle surplus reserves is clogging economic recovery.

It is at this blockade that the President is battering with his tax program. He believes that if the piled up hoard of undivided corporate profits (estimated by Treasury experts at $4,500,000,000) can be forced into movement, the result will be a tremendous infusion of purchasing power, with consequent benefits to business and employment.

The New Deal policies of dollar devaluation, government spending and loan guaranteeing were all aimed toward this end. The tax plan is the latest, and in some respects the most revolutionary, of the President's experiments in this basic economic problem.

ADVOCATES

Three of the younger inner circle advisers had much to do with crystallizing the President's views on the tax program.

They were Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury; and Robert Jackson, counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, recently promoted by the President to be Assistant Attorney General.

As early as the fall of 1934 Jackson urged on the President a drive against corporate surpluses. Eccles, a banker and industrialist, also had long favored such a program. Oliphant added his voice when the Supreme Court made a new tax measure necessary, by unbalancing the budget with its order returning the $500,000,000 impounded processing taxes.

SURPRISE

The nature of the President's tax program was a carefully guarded secret. It was a complete surprise to Democratic congressional leaders.

There was a good reason for this wariness. All of the old-line leaders were opposed to any kind of new tax measure. They favored only a re-enactment of the processing taxes in a new guise. Their big argument was that political strategy and expediency barred tax legislation in election years.

Applied to a bill that digs down into the pocket of the man in the street, their theory is sound. But the President's program doesn't do that.

CHAPTER 34

IT WAS well into the forenoon when the golfing party took its departure and Selwyn Marsh settled down to the solitary breakfast to which Thora summoned him.

"Looks as if we might have a quiet day for a while," he observed.

"Aren't you eating?"

"I had my coffee some time ago."

"Well, have some more. I've heard somewhere that the Scandinavian race are great coffee drinkers. For get you're Irish this morning and be sensible. It isn't often, any more, that I have a chance to do the talking around here." He helped himself to toast. "Hear you've gone in for polo now. Like it?"

"Not very seriously," Thora told him. "My Gordon is been showing me something about the game."

"Good teacher, is he?"

"I think he might be, if he had an apt pupil. The ponies know much more about it than I do. But it is fun!" Her blue eyes lighted at the recollection of those early-morning lessons in the sunny field.

"Sherrin tells me you take to it like an old hand," she says, "he's going to have you on the women's team before long. Seems like a dumb sort of game to me. But I'm glad you like it. I ought to be good for you. Just be careful and don't get hurt."

Marsh seemed to be turning something over in his mind. Presently, he inquired:

"You and Sherrin get along pretty well?"

"Why... yes, sir."

"Very decent, after he gets his ears knocked down a few times. A little too cocky, but I think he's showing some improvement lately. He doesn't get on my nerves the way he used to. I think, maybe, you're a good influence for him."

Before Thora could think of any reply to that surprising remark, Selwyn had changed the subject with his usual abruptness.

"Wilma is going to the city tomorrow morning and wants you to go with her," he came and asked if you might, she's learning," he added with a grim smile. "You could arrange it, I suppose."

"Why, yes, I think so."

"I think I'd be glad if you would. Pat will drive you. The grand duke is going along, but he's not coming back. Has some business that he claims will deprive us of his presence for a few days. Wilma will make her arrangements with you this evening. You can tell her it's all right with me."

Thora was not at all averse to the suggested arrangement. She had been to the city but once, and only for a few hours. She did not particularly like the idea of intruding herself upon Wilma, and it was for the ride in. But she would have Pat for company and once the city was reached, she undoubtedly would have time for various errands of her own.

"I don't want to drag you away for the day unless it suits you," Wilma explained that evening when she came over to Thora's room.

"But I would be awfully glad to have your company on the way back. I guess I've been going too hard lately. My nerves are jumpy and I hate to be alone."

Wilma and her fiance had the rear seat to themselves.

"I will be very glad to go," Thora assured her. "What time do you wish to start?"

"About 9. I haven't so much to do. There was a tense drawn expression on Wilma's small face. Her dark eyes looked tired. She forced herself to smile. "This is really an occasion. Alec is having my ring made at Edmonds. It's supposed to be ready and we are going to pick it up. Dad has been having some of my mother's jewelry reset for me. I want to see the things, too."

"I think that is lovely. I know how much you will prize them."

"There's a bunch of the junk. Dad showed it all to me when he took it out of the safe. Most of the things are so old-fashioned that they're in style. I don't care much for jewelry except diamonds. There are two rings and a bracelet, though. I'm crazy about it. It's almost time for the official broadcast, you know."

"Official?"

"Yes, Aunt Dorothy is giving a dinner over at her place. That is when the banns are going to be read. Poor dad is bored stiff at the prospect of making the announcement. He doesn't see any use in all this fuss. I don't mind myself. But there's Aunt Dorothy. She's taking it all so seriously and insisting that we live up to the traditions. You'd think it was her wedding we were getting ready for."

Thora smiled at Wilma's petulant tone. She was wondering at the moment why Mrs. Steele had not been invited on the forthcoming excursion. As if she had read her thoughts, Wilma remarked:

"I suppose the old dear will be hurt because I didn't ask her to go in and pass judgment on the new ring. But to tell you the truth I felt she would get on my nerves. You are a very restful person, you know," she added unexpectedly. "Good night and thanks."

Thora enjoyed the ride to the city rather more than she had anticipated. To Pat Donahue's undisguised pleasure, she asked if she might share the front seat with him. Wilma and her fiance had the rear seat of the limousine to themselves and their conversation came in faint murmurs that were easily drowned by the chauffeur's deep tones as he carried on animated conversation with his companion.

When the city was reached, Babbs suggested to Thora that she join Wilma and himself at lunch, but she declined. There were several commissions she must attend to, but she would be glad to meet Miss Marsh whenever the latter wanted.

"I'll tell you what we will do then," Wilma concluded. "Alec wants to catch a New York train a little after 5. Come to Edmonds' at 4. Miss Dahl. We will be there. We'll wait until you come. Then we can drop Alec at the station or wherever he wants to go. Will that be all right?"

"Of course. I will be there at 4." (Continued on Page Two)

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. A. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

WHY CAN'T IT BE DONE? LAST MONDAY I was shown the hand given below. It had been dealt at the Knickerbocker Whist club in a money game. South insisted upon playing the deal at 6-N Trumps. Each time North bid more spades. South bid no trumps higher. South played the hand well and fulfilled his contract. When I suggested that 6-Spades would have been more profitable, on account of the honor score, I was informed that a small slam could not be made at the trump call, as the opening lead would be a club. Suppose we see if the statement is true.

Win the opening club lead with dummy's Ace. Take six of declarer's trump tricks, to squeeze West, or to end play him. West will follow suit twice in spades, then he must make four discards. Dummy must discard five times, and it has to discard before West does, preventing any squeeze. West will strip clubs to the lone K, and dummy will bare Remove West's heart exit, by playing as follows: Play the Ace of hearts, followed by the J. Win with dummy's K. Lead dummy's last heart and ruff with declarer's last spade.

Lead a club, giving West his first and last trick, as he must now return a diamond up to dummy's A-Q, insuring declarer's 6-Spades contract. West must follow dummy's discards, or declarer possibly might make a grand slam. Suppose for example, that West's first discard is a diamond, while dummy's is a heart. Then dummy's diamonds can be established against "fenders," by leading declarer's single diamond, winning with the Ace, then having declarer ruff a low diamond. Dummy's K of hearts will enable declarer to enter dummy, and to discard both his clubs on dummy's diamonds.

END OF AN ERA

THE evidence is at every hand that the era of the street car is drawing to a close. In smaller cities the trolley car has surrendered completely to bus lines. Now the extermination of street cars in America's largest city on one of her most famous streets.

Busses have supplanted street cars on Broadway, operating from South Perry to Times Square and, it is reported, already are carrying 50 per cent more passengers than did the electric street cars which they replaced. If this volume of traffic continues, the bus will play the part of a go-getter in the transportation business. The experience on Broadway may find a parallel elsewhere in the city. Early estimates indicate that the busses on the Columbus-Lenox avenue line are carrying between 50 and 75 per cent more passengers than did the trolley car.

A part of the increased use of busses is explained by the fact that they have proved to be successful competitors of the taxicabs and of the subway. They also, doubtless, obtain patronage from among people who would make short journeys on foot rather than take the trolleys. But whatever the origin of the business of the busses, if they continue popular they will be used in increasing numbers.

Already there is talk in New York of the entire elimination of the street cars, and if New York can bring that to pass so can other large cities. It spells the final doom of the "broomstock train" whose praises were sung by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

BLUSTERY MARCH

MARCH, with its strong winds and fickle weathers, might be compared to some very blustering person, who talks loud and acts in a rough and violent way. Yet its constantly ascending sun is a redeeming feature, and this too emphatic creature keeps thawing us out with his sunny light, so we half like him after all.

March is an unpopular month in most climates, because of this boisterous character. But let us not be afraid of good strong March winds. March is the month when many of us dismiss the doctor, and decide we can go it alone.

An important success for the Ethiopians is reported by the cables. Opening of the rainy season finds Haile Selassie with his traditional sixteen umbrellas and Mussolini with none.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

Because he is so vehement an anti-red alarmist Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, has the reputation of being an ultra-conservative.

But he believes he is a liberal. And, decidedly against the consensus of opinion among his congressional associates, I agree with him.

For example, it seems to me that he demonstrated an extraordinary degree of open-mindedness, considering how anti-radical he is, when he recently expressed approval of the Columbia Broadcasting System's policy in granting free time to Secretary Earl Browder of the American Communist party.

As an outstanding "anti" to everything communistic, the New Yorker was chosen to answer Browder, which he did. He disputed Browder's assertions in every particular, but voiced his satisfaction that a chance had been afforded to the red spokesman to address the country. It proved, he said, that free speech exists in the United States.

THE RIGHT TO SAY

This is not the attitude of a reactionary. It is an intelligent attitude, too;

Fish could not have made so effective an anti-communistic radio talk if he had not been preceded by Browder—to be replied to, and demolished.

(As Voltaire remarked, "I dissent from every word you say, but I'll fight to the death in defense of your right to say it.")

WHY AN ISLAND

A few years ago Congressman Fish was quoted in favor of marooning Communists on an island. Insular isolation for folk one doesn't like is not a new idea, but there was something especially specific and intriguing in this particular hint and I interviewed the New Yorker on the subject.

"Why," I inquired, "an island?" "I hold," said the congressman, "no especial brief for an island, further than that it is convenient."

"From a restricted area on the mainland there would be continual escapes. A destroyer, constantly cruising 'round and 'round an island, would make escapes impossible."

"But why not kill 'em?" I queried.

INHUMAN TO KILL

The congressman looked shocked. "In the first place," he explained,

MOTIVE FOR FDR'S TAX PLAN TOLD

WASHINGTON — Revenue raising is only the secondary objective of the President's tax program.

Its chief purpose is the distribution of static wealth; to force into use billions of dollars lying idle in the coffers of corporations.

The germ of this underlying social motive was enunciated by Roosevelt in his surprise tax message last May, when his target was large inheritances.

Since then he has done considerable reading on the subject of taxation, particularly four slender volumes: "Brass Tacks" by David Cushman Coyle; "Income and Economic Progress", "America's Capacity to Produce" and "America's Capacity to Consume", the last three published by Brookings Institution.

The central theme of these studies is that the accumulation of idle surplus reserves is clogging economic recovery.

It is at this blockade that the President is battering with his tax program. He believes that if the piled up hoard of undivided corporation profits (estimated by Treasury experts at $4,500,000,000) can be forced into movement, the result will be a tremendous infusion of purchasing power, with consequent benefits to business and employment.

The New Deal policies of dollar devaluation, government spending and loan guaranteeing were all aimed toward this end. The tax plan is the latest, and in some respects the most revolutionary, of the President's experiments in this basic economic problem.

ADVOCATES

Three of the younger inner circle advisers had much to do with crystalizing the President's views on the tax program.

They were Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury; and Robert Jackson, counsel for the Internal Revenue Bureau, recently promoted by the President to be Assistant Attorney General.

As early as the fall of 1934 Jackson urged on the President a drive against corporation surpluses. Eccles, a banker and industrialist, also had long favored such a program. Oliphant added his voice when the Supreme Court made a new tax measure necessary, by unbalancing the budget with its order returning the $500,000,000 impounded processing taxes.

SURPRISE

The nature of the President's tax program was a carefully guarded secret. It was a complete surprise to Democratic congressional leaders.

There was a good reason for this wariness. All of the old-line leaders were opposed to any kind of new tax measure. They favored only a re-enactment of the processing taxes in a new guise. Their big argument was that political strategy and expediency barred tax legislation in election years.

Applied to a bill that digs down into the pocket of the man in the street, their theory is sound. But the President's program doesn't do that.

With All My Heart

CHAPTER 34

IT WAS well into the forenoon when the golfing party took its departure and Selwyn Marsh settled down to the solitary breakfast to which Thora summoned him.

"Looks as if we might have a quiet day... for a while," he observed.

"Aren't you eating?"

"I had my coffee some time ago." "Well, have some more. I've had somewhere that the Scandinavian race are great coffee drinkers. Forget you're Irish this morning and be sociable. It isn't often, any more, that I have a chance to do the talking around here." He helped himself to toast. "Hear you've gone in for polo now. Like it?"

"Not very seriously," Thora told him. "Mr. Gordon has been showing me something about the game."

"Good teacher, is he?" "I think he might be, if he had an apt pupil. The ponies know much more about it than I do. But it is fun!" Her blue eyes lighted at the recollection of those early-morning lessons in the sunny field.

"Selwyn tells me you take to it like an old hand," says he's going to have you on the women's team before long. Seems like a dumb sort of game to me. But I'm glad you like it. I ought to be good for you. Just be careful and don't get hurt." Marsh seemed to be turning something over in his mind. Presently, he inquired:

"You and Sherm get along pretty well?"

"Why... yes, sir." "Very decent chap... or will be some day, after he gets his ears knocked down a few times. A little too cocky, but I think he's showing some improvement lately. He doesn't get on my nerves the way he used to. I think, maybe, you're a good influence for him."

Before Thora could think of any reply to that surprising remark, Selwyn had changed the subject with his usual abruptness.

"Wilma is going to the city tomorrow morning and wants you to go with her... came and asked if you might. She's learning," he added with a grim smile. "You could arrange it, I suppose?"

"Why, yes, I think so."

"I think I'd be glad if you would. Pat will drive you. The grand duke is going along, but he's not coming back. Has some business that he claims will deprive us of his presence for a few days. Wilma will make her arrangements with you this evening. You can tell her it's all right with me. Just as long as she brings you back."

Thora was not at all averse to the suggested arrangement. She had been to the city but once, and only for a few hours. She did not particularly relish the idea of intruding herself upon Wilma and Al Babba for the ride in. But she would have Pat for company and, once the city was reached, she undoubtedly would have time for various errands of her own.

"I don't want to drag you away for the day unless it suits you," Wilma explained that evening when she came over to Thora's rooms. "But I would be awfully glad to have your company on the way back. I guess I've been going too hard lately... nerves are jumpy and I hate to be alone."

Wilma and her fiancé had the rear seat to themselves.

"I will be very glad to go," Thora assured her. "What time do you wish to start?"

"About 9. I haven't so much to do..." There was a tense drawn expression on Wilma's small face. Her dark eyes looked tired. She forced herself to smile. "This is really an occasion. Alec is having my ring made at Edmond's. It's supposed to be ready and we are going to pick it up. Dad has been having some of my mother's jewelry reset for me. I want to see the things, too."

"I think that is lovely. I know how much you will prize them." "There's a bunch of the junk. Dad showed it all to me when he took it out of the safe. Most of the things are so old-fashioned that they're in style. I don't care much for jewelry... except diamonds. There are two rings and a bracelet, though. That I'm crazy about. It's almost time for the official broadcast, you know."

"Official?" "Yes, Aunt Dorothy is giving a dinner... over at her place. That is when the banns are going to be read. Poor dad is bored stiff at the prospect of making the announcement. He doesn't seem any use in all this fuss. I don't myself."

There's Aunt Dorothy. She's taking it all so seriously and insisting that we live up to the traditions. You'd think it was her wedding we were getting ready for."

Thora smiled at Wilma's reticent tone. She was wondering at the moment why Mrs. Steele had not been invited on the forthcoming excursion. As if she had read her thoughts, Wilma remarked:

"I suppose the old dear will be hurt because I didn't ask her to go in and pass judgment on the new ring. But to tell you the truth I felt she would get on my nerves. You are a very restful person, you know," she added unexpectedly. "Good night and thanks."

Thora enjoyed the ride to the city rather more than she had anticipated. To Pat Donahue's undisguised pleasure, she asked if she might share the front seat with him. Wilma and her fiancé had the rear seat of the limousine to themselves and their conversation came in faint murmurs that were easily drowned by the chauffeur's deep tones as he carried on animated conversation with his companion.

When the city was reached, Babba suggested to Thora that she join Wilma and himself at lunch, but she declined. There were several commissions she must attend to, but she would be glad to meet Miss Marsh whenever the latter wanted.

"I'll tell you what we will do then," Wilma concluded. "Alec wants to catch a New York train a little after 5. Come to Edmond's at 4. Miss Dahl. We will be there... we'll wait until you come. Then we can drop Alec at the station or wherever he wants to go. Will that be all right?" "Of course. I will be there at 4." (Continued on Page Two)

No Medical Tests Given to Private Driver

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ABOUT SIX MONTHS ago I began to keep a record of automobile accidents reported in the newspapers in my own city. A notable absence which suddenly struck me as the list grew, was a record of taxicabs in accidents. In order to confirm this impression I made inquiry and learned from a commercial taxicab company that they had had no passenger fatalities since 1910, and that their cabs had been in no accidents in which deaths were involved since 1932.

When you connect this, to me, astonishing record, up with the statement that 90 per cent of airplane fatalities in the Royal Air Corps were due to physical defects in the pilots, it makes you wonder how many physical defects are present in individuals driving private cars because about 100 per cent of fatal accidents occur in such vehicles.

Why No Tests?

Why have we no test for the physical fitness of the private driver? How many cities even require a test for color blindness? We know that 4 per cent of all males are more or less color blind. A few cases have been reported in women, but the weight of evidence goes to show that it is a male characteristic. Therefore, and out of every twenty-five cars driven by a man contains an occupant who cannot tell the red from the green lights. It is true that color blind people say that they can tell a slight difference, but if that is true, why should engineers, airplane pilots and drivers of public conveyances be tested as to their fitness in this respect?

What are the nervous reactions of car drivers? How quickly can they respond to a mental warning to stop when they see a car coming from another direction? I suppose that if any community really tried to enforce such examinations a wall would go up that would drown out the sobbing of the Liberty League or of the Constitution. But if anyone needed any argument, look at the difference in the record between the taxicabs driven by medically selected drivers and the unselected group.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By E. A. SHEPARD, Famous Bridge Teacher

WHY CAN'T IT BE DONE?

LAST MONDAY I was shown the hand given below. It had been dealt at the Knickerbocker Whist club in a money game. South insisted upon playing the deal at 6-No Trumps. Each North bid more spades. South bid no trumps higher. South played the hand well and fulfilled his contract. When I suggested that 6-Spades would have been more profitable, on account of the honor score, I was informed that a small slam could not be made at the trump call, as the opening lead would be a club. Suppose we see if the statement is true.

Win the opening club lead with dummy's Ace. Take six of declarer's trump tricks, to squeeze West, or to end play him. West will follow suit twice in spades, then he must make four discards. Dummy must discard five times, and it has to discard before West does, preventing any squeeze. West will strip clubs to the lone K, and dummy will bare Remove West's heart exit, by playing as follows: Play the Ace of hearts, followed by the J. Win with dummy's K. Lead dummy's last heart and ruff with declarer's last spade.

Lead a club, giving West his first and last trick, as he must now return a diamond up to dummy's A-Q, insuring declarer's 6-Spades contract.

West must follow dummy's discards, or declarer possibly might make a grand slam. Suppose for example, that West's first discard is a diamond, while dummy's is a heart. Then dummy's diamonds can be established against "fenders," by leading declarer's single diamond, winning with the Ace, then having declarer ruff a low diamond. Dummy's K of hearts will enable declarer to enter dummy, and to discard both his clubs on dummy's diamonds.

A business session was conducted during which plans were made for the pre-school clinic to be held this spring, the county track meet, and the final P. T. A. meeting of this year on April 23.

A very interesting and entertain- ing program followed, with Mrs. B. W. Young, chairman of the program committee, in charge.

The first number was two selections by an instrumental quartet comprised of George and Philip Wilson, Junior Mowery, and Junior Dreisbach. They played "Come Back to Erin" and "Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms."

The eighth grade chorus sang "Winter Carnival" and "Funiculi-Funicula," after which Miss Betty Scothern of Walnut-twp entertained with two beautiful violin solos. She was accompanied by Mrs. Cromley.

Five interesting and beneficial talks featured the program. F. K. Blair, county farm agent, discussed the subject, "What Constitutes a Four-Square Community," in which he stressed the need of a fertile soil to support the people.

An adequate school system, religious attitudes satisfactory for growing children, and social organizations, which will give the young people a deep rich heritage.

In discussing the contribution the school can make to the community, County Supt. George D. McDowell said that the schools should send forth young people with knowledge of health, willingness to work, a keen intellect, and ability to think deeply, imagine vividly, and will nobly.

Rev. L. C. Sherburne was the third speaker using as his subject "What the Church Can Contribute to the Community." He stated that the church is "not to serve scorn" but to minister indirectly to the community by exerting a spiritual influence in all phases of men's activities.

Mrs. Homer Reher spoke particularly of the Christian farm home as the place to develop honesty, truthfulness, respect for law, tastes for good literature and good music, and ideals of service to mankind.

"What Youth Can Contribute to the Community" was the subject of the final address by Robert Terhune, in which he said that young people could help their community by observing good health habits, keeping out of trouble, practicing good manners, cooperating in all worthwhile community activities, and by doing the best one is able to do in all things.

A delightful social hour was enjoyed by the large group at the close of the meeting.

Barrymore, Jimmy Dykes On Al Jolson Program

Vi Bradley, Clyde Hager to Have Parts; Miriam Hopkins to Star in Monday Evening's Dramatic Hour

Drama by Lionel Barrymore will be interspersed with pre-season baseball gossip between Big League Manager Jimmy Dykes and Master of Ceremonies Al Jolson when Chateau goes on the air Saturday night. Other guest artists include Vi Bradley, Hollywood night club singer-pianist, and Clyde Hager, West Coast comedian, who complete the bill for the variety broadcast over a WEAF-NBC network at 9:30 p. m. (EST).

Barrymore, beloved star of stage, screen and radio productions, will appear before the microphone in a character part. His play will be announced later. From the winter training camp in Pasadena will come Jimmy Dykes, spirited young pilot of the Chicago White Sox, to give listeners a preview of diamond dope and outline what he thinks will be the features of this year's pennant race in both leagues.

Miss Bradley, who has captivated the movie colony's night club audiences as few entertainers have ever done, will be on hand to sing her own songs in the manner which has made her a prime favorite. Scheduled for a visit to the Chateau three weeks ago, she was unable to appear and joins the show next week instead. Hilarious moments will be provided by the humorous Mr. Hager.

Hopkins to Star

Miriam Hopkins, the dramatic star who opened the Radio theatre a year and a half ago, returns to play the lead in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" on Monday, March 16. The dynamic star of stage and screen will be heard in her first complete radio dramatic role since the premiers of Radio theatre when this is broadcast over a WEAF-NBC network at 9:00 p. m. (EST.)

"The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," written by Frederick Lonsdale, was first produced in London in September, 1925, and in this country by Charles Dillingham at New York's Fulton theatre on November 9, 1925. Ina Claire, Helen Hayes and Roland Young played the leading parts in this production and it is interesting to note that all of these players have been heard in the Lux Radio theatre during its long network run. This drama, later made into a movie with Norma Shearer and Basil Rathbone, was one of Broadway's great successes and is often revived.

Barrymore, Jimmy Dykes On Al Jolson Program

Vi Bradley, Clyde Hager to Have Parts; Miriam Hopkins to Star in Monday Evening's Dramatic Hour

Drama by Lionel Barrymore will be interspersed with pre-season baseball gossip between Big League Manager Jimmy Dykes and Master of Ceremonies Al Jolson when Chateau goes on the air Saturday night. Other guest artists include Vi Bradley, Hollywood night club singer-pianist, and Clyde Hager, West Coast comedian, who complete the bill for the variety broadcast over a WEAF-NBC network at 9:30 p. m. (EST).

Barrymore, beloved star of stage, screen and radio productions, will appear before the microphone in a character part. His play will be announced later. From the winter training camp in Pasadena will come Jimmy Dykes, spirited young pilot of the Chicago White Sox, to give listeners a preview of diamond dope and outline what he thinks will be the features of this year's pennant race in both leagues.

Miss Bradley, who has captivated the movie colony's night club audiences as few entertainers have ever done, will be on hand to sing her own songs in the manner which has made her a prime favorite. Scheduled for a visit to the Chateau three weeks ago, she was unable to appear and joins the show next week instead. Hilarious moments will be provided by the humorous Mr. Hager.

Hopkins to Star

Miriam Hopkins, the dramatic star who opened the Radio theatre a year and a half ago, returns to play the lead in "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney" on Monday, March 16. The dynamic star of stage and screen will be heard in her first complete radio dramatic role since the premiers of Radio theatre when this is broadcast over a WAAC-CBS network at 9:00 p. m. (EST).

"The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," written by Frederick Lonsdale, was first produced in London in September, 1925, and in this country by Charles Dillingham at New York's Fulton theatre on November 9, 1925. Ina Claire, Helen Hayes and Roland Young played the leading parts in this production and it is interesting to note that all of these players have been heard in the Lux Radio theatre during its long network run.

This drama, later made into a movie with Norma Shearer and Basil Rathbone, was one of Broadway's great successes and is often revived.

SPORTSMEN SEEKING EASEMENTS FOR 15 SMALL DAMS

PICKAWAY CLUB MEMBERS PLAN MUCH ACTIVITY

Program for Protection of Game on Highways Advised in Resolution

By FRANKLIN KIBLER

Sites and easements from land owners for a series of 15 small dams in Pickaway-co streams as a WPA project will be obtained by representatives of the Pickaway Farmer's and Sportsman's association this week.

H. E. Betz, president of the club, Harry Griner and Ralph Wood, local engineers, will be in charge of the preliminary work and expect to have it completed before March 15.

The committee was appointed Tuesday evening at a meeting of the association held at the Elks club.

Could Be Approved

Vattier Courtwright, WPA engineer, told club members he believed the project would be immediately approved and urged sportsmen to complete the preliminary work as quickly as possible.

Logs and stones will be used for the dams and material costs, consisting largely of nails, wire and lag screws, will be supplied by the club. Stones and logs will be obtained along the streams with no expense to the club and a number of locations have already been offered by landowners.

The purpose of the dams is to retard strong currents during high water periods and help maintain the streams in dry weather, provide watering places for stock, raise the water table in wells, provide better fishing and water for irrigation purposes and aid in combating drought.

The dams will be constructed so as not to involve danger to property either up or downstream. Numerous plans have been offered for their construction and they will be placed in sites where they will be a benefit to landowners.

A resolution asking the Columbus Auto club and its affiliated organizations to sponsor a program for the protection of game on the highways was introduced by Ed Rausenberger and adopted by the association.

Mr. Rausenberger explained a large amount of game was killed annually by autos and the slaughter could be greatly reduced if motorists drove more carefully. He contended many motorists, when on an open highway, try to hit game crossing the road. The resolution, to be prepared by Mr. Rausenberger, will urge the club to use a series of educational articles on game protection.

Members voted to purchase 10 dozen pheasant eggs and have the chicks raised until they are five-weeks old by a game raiser recommended by the conservation department. The eggs will cost between seven and 10 cents each and price for rearing the chicks will be 25 cents each.

Clarence Francis, local conservation officer, reported a shipment of pheasants would be received from the conservation department in the near future and will be divided among the Farmer's and Sportsman's association, Pickaway-co Bird Dog club and Tri-County club at New Holland. He urged club members to locate suitable districts for releasing the birds.

248 Are Members

Reports given by Harry Bartholomew, club secretary, show the total memberships sold during the recent drive totalled 248. Stubbs presented at the banquet numbered 226 and reports indicated the club would clear about $35.

The 12 dozen Missouri rabbits, recently released, cost the club $108. Mr. Bartholomew reported. This amount does not include 40 rabbits purchased by Mr. Rausenberger.

Upon recommendation of a committee, appointed to determine a suitable expense account for the secretary, members voted to pay Mr. Bartholomew $36 a year. The money will be used to cover expenses of delivering and collecting licenses through the county.

Arrangements were made to urge sportsmen of local lodges and civic organizations to purchase their licenses for fishing and hunting through club members, so fees could be used for restocking streams with fish and purchasing game. Advertising for this purpose was approved also.

A rising vote of thanks to the Elks house committee for the use of the lodge for the annual banquet was given M. L. Binklev, a member of the committee and treasurer of the sportsmen's club.

NEARLY $7,000 MORE DISTRIBUTED AMONG SCHOOLS

FUEL AND SALES TAX FUND SENT TO RURAL AREAS

McDowell's Letter Says Money May Be Used to Pay Back Bills

Another distribution of school funds, the second this week, was made Wednesday morning by George McDowell, county superintendent.

This distribution of $6,979.88 covers liquid fuel and sales taxes accruing prior to Jan. 1 and is on the basis of $1.78 1/2 per average daily attendance, and lists liquid fuel taxes at $1.16 and the sales tax 62 1/2 cents.

A similar distribution will be made to Circleville schools but C. R. Barnhart, clerk of the Board of Education, stated he had not received the warrants at noon Wednesday.

Ruling Received

The previous distribution made Tuesday was the first quarterly payment under the foundation program. The attorney general in an opinion issued March 2, ruled as follows: "Proceeds of liquid fuel taxes, cigarette taxes and sales taxes which under the law are distributable for school purposes and which accrued or which were the yield of those taxes prior to Jan. 1, 1936, should be regarded as 1935 revenues, and should be distributed to school districts as were other funds accruing from said taxes during the year 1935."

This money, if necessary, may be used to pay old bills which were accruing before Jan. 1, Mr. McDowell stated in a letter sent to the clerks of the township and village boards. The foundation program allotment may be used to pay bills for current operating expenses which have been created since Jan. 1.

The distribution follows: Townships—

- Darby, $496.40;
- Deercreek, $566.03;
- Harrison, $182.13;
- Jackson, $423.19;
- Madison, $207.13;
- Monroe, $432.11;
- Muhlenberg, $282.12;
- Perry, $294.62;
- Pickaway, $483.90;
- Saltcreek, $349.98;
- Scioto, $628.53;
- Walnut, $741.02;
- Washington, $353.55;
- Wayne, $174.99;
- Ashville Village, $658.88;
- New Holland, $517.82;
- South Bloomfield, $116.06;
- Tartton, $71.42.

Hatfield, a soft-spoken Presbyterian minister, has been a Democrat in previous campaigns, but will run as an independent against Bell. Bell is chairman of the congressional investigating committee.

high speed army bombers. The motor was developed through the cooperative efforts of the air corps engineering staff at Wright field, Dayton, O., and the Wright company.

"In its manufacture," the war department explained, "are incorporated the new dynamic damper which practically eliminates torsional vibrations in crankshafts, new super-charge devices, new types of cylinder heads with a greatly increased cooling area, which has resulted in lower fuel consumption, which, according to engineers, is now comparable to that of Diesel engines."

The war department explained that 328 of the motors of 1,000 horsepower would be used for installation and as spares for 82 new all metal twin-engine bombing planes now being manufactured by The Douglas Aircraft Co.

Another 104 engines will be used for 13 four-engined, all-metal bombing planes under construction by the Boeing Airplane Co.

Aside from the powerful motors for bombers, the contract awarded today includes 80 Wright whirlwind motors of 450 horsepower for use in training planes.
